Faunal Analysis

Providing a professional and cost-effective service to consultants, universities and the heritage sector across the United Kingdom and Europe.

Animal bone is often one of the most abundant materials recovered from archaeological sites and, where present, forms an integral part of many site interpretations.

To assist you in extracting the maximum amount of information from your excavations, Archaeological Services offers:

- Advice regarding on-site sampling strategies
- Assessments including statements of potential
- Detailed analysis and interpretations
- Archive and publication reports

All work is completed to English Heritage and Institute for Archaeologists' standards by qualified and experienced personnel.

Reports are fully compliant with industry-standard specifications.
